Interviewer: Was there a union presence at all?

Mike: There was - very, very rarely invoked. I think in the whole time I worked there, that was one strike and that was by mutual agreement that it would be on a Wednesday afternoon when they weren't too busy. We stood in the car park for about three quarters of an hour, everyone went back to work. Management got the point and they agreed... I can't remember what it was. It wasn't exactly about pay, it was something related to pay, but also a general rise. And it was all agreed. That was it. Yeah, it was a good company in that respect, in that the management did respect the unions.
