Yeah, it was good. I always enjoyed going to work; and it was lovely coming home as well, you know... Yeah, everything was good about it... Yeah... Sometimes the challenges were hard, but you always had a team. Um... You weren't ever sort of, like, put out: 'That's up to you! Don't care how you do it; it's your problem!' There was never anything like that, or... um... anything at all... it was always working together... And there didn't seem to be any sort of great divides... you know... if you were, like, as an apprentice, or, as a manager, or whatever... Everyone was there for you. You worked together. That was how you learned, you know: asking questions, working together and... Um... Yeah, I really admired that. I loved it! It was not hard graft in that way. Only inasmuch as you got fulfillment out of it. Loved it. Ummm.
